Head Quarters of the Camp of Rycholt, Aug. 17, N.S. The Enemy are entrenching themselves in their new Camp near Tongres; they had work'd several Days at it before they had quitted their Camp of the Grand Commanderie. It is thought they will detach from their present Camp, to reinforce the Corps before Bergen-op-Zoom, under the Command of M. de Lowendahl. Twenty Battalions are ordered to hold themselves in Readiness for that Purpose; they give out that the French King will soon return to Versailles.

Every Thing is ready for an approaching March, which the Army is ordered to hold itself in Readiness to make. Our Bridges below the Town of Maestricht are broke up, in Order to be transported higher up the Meuse: One has been already thrown over the River at Esden, a little higher up than Castres, and the Engineers have begun to work this Morning at a Tete de Pont.

On the Motions of the Enemy up the River, Lieutenant General Mercy has extended his Posts higher up above Liege, as far as Quipenpoix. Great Quantities of Forage are preparing for the March of the Army that Way.

A large Convoy of British Artillery and Ammunition arrived Yesterday in this Camp from Boisleduc, to replace what was destroy'd in the late Action.

The Enemy has been oblig'd already to send away from Namur, a great Part of the Artillery and Stores which were design'd for the Siege of Maestricht, to supply that of Bergen-op-Zoom.

Letter from Bergen-op-Zoom, August 17, N.S. On Tuesday, between Eleven and Twelve at Night, the Enemy made an Assault upon the Lunette of Zealand, between the Wou Gate and that of Old Boisleduc: Our Miners, under the Command of Captain Bouquoin, took their Measures so well, that they sprung a Mine situated in the Works of the French on the Side of the Cover'd Way, by which they lost above 200 Men, and great Part of their Works were ruined; notwithstanding which they advanced, and made the Assault upon the said Lunette, but were so well received, that they were obliged to retire. Soon after, the French having been reinforced, renewed the Attack; our Soldiers, sustained by the Piquets, repulsed them a second Time. The Action lasted two Hours without Interruption, with a continual Fire from the Musquetry, and the Cannon from the Batteries. The French having again been reinforced, returned to the Charge Yesterday Morning at Day-break; our People received them furiously with Bayonets fixed, were supported by the Reserve, and drove them back to the Pallisades. At Six o'Clock we made a Sally to dislodge them from thence, but in vain. We lost about 200 Men in the three Attacks, and the Enemy 600.

Captain

Captain Bouquoin of the Miners is wounded in the Shoulder, and it is feared he will not be able to ſerve again ſoon. P. S. Nine o'Clock in the Morning. I am juſt now told, that a Party of our Voluntiers found Means at Day-break to drive the French from the Palliſades, and deſtroy the Works which they had made there.

Rotterdam, Auguſt 18, N. S. By all Accounts from the Lines of Bergen-op-Zoom, the French have ſuſpended, if not abandon'd the Attack of Fort Rover. Captain Frazer, of Lord John Murray's Regiment, was killed by a Random Shot.

Hague Aug. 18. By our laſt Accounts from Bergen-op Zoom, the Beſieged continued to make a very vigorous Defence, though the French have made ſome Progreſs in their late Attacks, particularly on the 16th, when they lodged themſelves upon an Angle of a Half-Moon without Coehorn's Baſtion. The Struggle for that Poſt has coſt many Lives on both Sides, the Enemy having been once diſlodged after they had taken Poſt, though in the End they remain'd Maſters of their Ground. As to the Attack upon Fort Rover, the Enemy have gain'd very little Ground; they are ſaid to have abandon'd their Hopes of forcing the Lines, and ſeem determined to unite all their Force to puſh the principal Attack. The Night before laſt the Garriſon of Fort Rover made a very ſucceſsful Sally, having ſurprized three of the Enemy's Poſts, and put all to the Sword that they met with, except a very ſmall Number which they brought back Priſoners,
